Dangerous storms and monster tornados. A gamble that might ruin everything. A family caught in the middle.

Welcome to Falling Skies. Do you have what it takes to survive?

Six weeks after an asteroid turned America upside down, Caleb Machert is barely hanging on. With a bullet wound to the thigh and a shoulder that might never work again, he's more liability than hero. If he can't protect his family, they may not last much longer.

Elizabeth doesn't know if she's cut out for this new world. Her daughter is more stone cold killer than teenage girl, her husband is a walking cripple, and she's never been good at taking charge. But when her daughter is threatened, Elizabeth finds out just how strong she really is.

Lana knows she's got to be strong; her father is seriously wounded and her mother is, well, soft. When she miscalculates her ability, she puts all their lives at risk. The entire family must come together to escape not only a group of zealous survivors, but the latest round of mother nature's chaos.

It's a race against the clock for the Macherts to escape before a super tornado tears them apart.

Wind and Chaos is book three in Falling Skies, a post-apocalyptic thriller series following ordinary people struggling to survive when a meteor strike plunges the United States into chaos.
