A story of a young Black woman and her journey growing up in an era of self-discovery, civil rights, women's lib, and the perceived right to choose your own destiny. A story of pain that leads to self-awareness and a sense of personal peace. This author talks about forbidden subjects and the demand for all women across the planet to stand up and speak out against the violence we endure from conception. The violence we experience in our homes while left unprotected. It will move you to make a change. When Luther sings "you stopped loving me", he is singing my life. I just want to know why my mother stopped loving me and how it is even possible to stop loving your children. I don't think I'll ever know, but I know you can heal and have an even better life than the one that started your journey. So here are my thoughts on how I am doing life feeling free of the trauma that stopped
