You've probably seen this strange-looking dog before and wondered what it was all about. The Bull Terrier is a long-faced dog that originated in England. A Bull Terrier was created by crossing an English Terrier with a bulldog around 1835. This cross has developed a tough white dog over the years.

This breed has been bred to be rugged, but they are still sweet dogs. These dogs have a reputation for being vicious gladiators in blood sports such as bullfighting. They became dogfighters after that was made illegal, but the government caught up with them again.
