These frank, affecting poems find powerful sources in the jolts and blows of family life. In Brandon Dameshek's Who Would You Be? the formative patterns constellate brightly, like radiant bruises: "starbursts of a rage/we didn't know we owned, but somehow loved."

-Greg Glazner, author of Singularity

Dameshek's poetry has appeared in a variety of publications, including The Cimarron Review, The Coe Review and Conte. He is a former recipient of the Eileen Lannan Prize for Poetry. Who Would You Be? is his debut collection.
